For people who suffer from a temporary or permanent handicap, Score developed a range of products which make it easy to continue working or start working again. For example, there are height and adjustable-angle leg supports, for 1 or 2 legs. Patients suffering from hip arthrosis are compelled to do complicated exercises on a daily basis in order to stimulate the blood circulation in the hip joint. The ergonomically shaped Artromove gives patients the possibility to fit these exercises easily into their daily life. For people with a rigid leg or a leg length difference, the Artrodese chair can be a solution. Both leg supports can be separately adjusted at an angle which reduces the pressure on the back of the thigh. For people with problems with muscle tension or who need extra stability, Score developed the Triple chassis. Its H-shaped frame is applicable to most of the chair models. The Triple chassis is provided with large wheels and a central brake. Score also has a sturdy and easy adjustable phlebotomy chair with 1 fixed, inclined armrest in its assortment.
